General Meeting
1803-1839

Preface

The General Assembly of the Supreme Georgian Government was established upon the annexation of Georgia to Russia, along with the formation of a new administrative apparatus.

The new system of Governance of Georgia was based on the "resolution of internal governance in Georgia" issued simultaneously with the manifesto on Georgia's accession to Russia dated September 12, 1801.

Foundation: PSZRI, 1801, art.20007.

During the existence of the General Assembly of the Supreme Georgian Government, there have been no changes in functions.

The General Assembly of the Supreme Georgian Government existed until November 27, 1838, when it was abolished and replaced by the newly established Council of the Main Administration of the Transcaucasian Territory, to which the functions of the General Assembly were partially transferred.

In fact, the General Assembly continued its actions to finish what had been started and transfer unfinished business to the Council, almost until the end of 1839.

Foundation: POZRI, 1838, November 27, art. 11780; foundation No. 1, 803.

The General Assembly was the highest authority for all expeditions belonging to the Supreme Georgian Government: Executive, State, Criminal and Civil. At the General Meeting, appeals were accepted for consideration on all cases decided by expeditions, where by a majority of votes the cases had to be resolved definitively, but in fact the cases were finally decided by the chief executive alone.

Subsequently, the functions of the General Assembly narrowed and communicated until confirming the authenticity of the royal documents, presenting an opinion on a particular issue and giving a "clarification" of the rules and procedures that existed under the Georgian tsars.
